Manitoulin and Baie-Sainte-Marie Continue Popular Series
by Serge Pelletier

The death of Jerry Remick was a shock for most of us and a blow to the hobby. Jerry was not only a good friend to me; he was my mentor, as he was the one who guided me when I "discovered" municipal trade tokens (which were then called "trade dollars") and decided to catalogue them. Some of the more "learned" numismatists often brushed Jerry off as just someone who wrote about current issues, saying that there was not much research behind his writings. I disagree. Jerry did something far more important, in my numismatic book, he captured data for future numismatists, data that would have otherwise disappeared because of the current legal void concerning mandatory "legal deposit" of such items as municipal trade tokens, and the lack of enforcement when it comes to the deposit of medals to the National Archives. I have decided to continue Jerry's work of capturing vital data for future numismatic researchers.

Before everything I must advise you that, at Jerry's suggestion and with his encouragement, I started getting involved in the production side of municipal trade tokens back in 1996 and continue to be heavily involved. I am part owner of Eligi Consultants Inc. and its subsidiary, Bonavita. My promise to you, the collector, is that I will treat all issues equally, regardless of who produced them and who is selling them, as long as the mints and issuers provide me with the information. To maintain that moral separation, I will write about all issues as if I was a third party.

Manitoulin salutes Spring and Farming on latest tokens

The Little Current Lions Club was struck a hard blow last fall when long time Haweater Dollar Program Coordinator Rolly Racicot died suddenly. But it has decided to carry on with Canada's longest running municipal trade token series. "Rolly had already identified the subjects for 2005" said David Walton, the new Program Coordinator, "so we decided to continue with them". The subject of the ever so popular Haweater 20 Dollars is farming while the Haweater 3 Dollars is the last in a four year series and features Spring.

Haweater 20 Dollars

The 20-Dollar token is a tribute to farming. The island was opened to non-native settlers in 1863, after provincial land surveyors had laid out township boundaries, following a treaty with the natives when the provincial government purchased most of the land. The determined pioneers faced, however, many hardships in the early years because of the stony soil. The areas settled were usually the higher, dry lands, which required much labour to clear. The 41 x 41mm square enamelled antique brass token captures the evolution of farming over the past couple of centuries. The top portion of the obverse shows a pioneer ploughing a field with the help of his horse while the bottom shows a modern day tractor bailing hay. These two scenes are separated by the word "FARMING" which has been coloured using translucent brown enamel. The result is most pleasing and transcends both classic and modern coinage. It is available through the exclusive distributor, Bonavita (address below) at the price indicated below. S&H and taxes are extra.

The Little Current Lions Club has been issuing a 20-Dollar token (or the equivalent 2000-Cent token) since 2000. Originally intended as a one year only project, it has evolved into an annual issue. "I get phone calls all the time" explains Walton, "asking if we are going to make a $20 this year and wanting to reserve a few". "They sure are popular with collectors" confirms Ray Desjardins of Bonavita, the official distributor for all Manitoulin tokens, "the 2000 piece is already worth $300 and the 2001 and 2002 well over $100 each, I've never seen circulation pieces appreciate this much, in such little time, in my more than 25 years of selling MTTs!"

Haweater 3 Dollars

As for the 3-Dollar token, this year marks the end of the "An Island for All Seasons" series by celebrating Spring, and nothing says Spring like maple sugaring! So, this token features a tapped maple with a collection bucket with a sugar shack in the background... Can you smell the maple sap boiling? As per previous years, the 32-millimetre token was struck in three metals: bimetallic (heart of cupronickel with ring of aluminium-bronze), antique commercial bronze and gold plated. They are also available from Bonavita (address below) at the price indicated below. S&H and taxes are extra.

The Clare Tourism Association has issued two different tokens this year, "a 250 cents to commemorate the 250th anniversary of the of the Deportation of the Acadians and a 400 cents to commemorate the 400th anniversary of the founding of Port-Royal" said Jean LeBlanc, the token program coordinator, which are their 10th and 11th issues. They have currency value, at participating merchants in the Baie-Sainte-Marie area, until October 31, 2005. The tokens also salute the "Festival Acadien de Clare" (Clare Acadian Festival).

250 Cents

The first piece, a 250 cents, a Canadian first, commemorates the 250th anniversary of the Deportation of the Acadians. Featured on the obverse is a scene showing British soldiers taking away an Acadian while his wife is watching. The token was struck in the following metals: antique bronze, bimetallic with a heart of cupronickel, and a ring of aluminium-bronze, nickel plated, gold plated, enamelled bimetallic and enamelled gold plated. The enamelled tokens show the festival's logo in colour. They are available from the exclusive distributor, Bonavita (address below) at the prices indicated below. S&H and taxes are extra.

The period between 1755 and 1762 was a very tragic time for the Acadians as it was in those years that the British authorities decided to enforce a deportation order. Under that order, Acadians were stripped of all their rights and placed in the holds of over-crowded ships bound for destinations unknown. The traumatic events deeply scarred the Acadian people. Memories of the terrors of the deportation and exile lasted for generations.

In total over ten thousand Acadians were either deported, imprisoned or escaped, or hid in the wooded hillsides close by. For those who did run ingenious ways were contrived by the authorities to force them out of hiding. Winslow had warned the Acadians that "if within 2 days the absent ones are not delivered up, military execution would be immediately visited upon the next of kin."

July 28, 2005 will mark the first "Day of Commemoration of the Great Upheaval" in accordance with a Royal Proclamation of the Government of Canada dated December 11, 2003. The proclamation recognizes that the deportation had "tragic consequences, including the deaths of many thousands of Acadians-from disease, in shipwrecks, in their places of refuge and in prison camps in Nova Scotia and England as well as in the British colonies in America". On a more positive note, the proclamation does express her majesty's hope that "the Acadian people can turn the page on this dark chapter of their history".

400 Cents

The second token, a 400 Cents, another Canadian first, commemorates the 400th anniversary of the founding of Port-Royal. Featured on the obverse is "the Habitation" built by Pierre du Gua de Mons and his men in 1605. The token was struck in the following metals: nickel plated, bimetallic with a heart of cupronickel, and a ring of aluminium-bronze, gold plated, enamelled bimetallic and enamelled gold plated. The enamelled tokens show the festival's logo in colour. They are available from the exclusive distributor, Bonavita (address below) at the prices indicated below. S&H and taxes are extra.

Port Royal was the site of the first enduring European Settlement in Canada and was the first European settlement north of Florida. It was located on what is now the north shore of the Annapolis Basin (sometimes called the Annapolis River) in Nova Scotia. Over time, the name Port Royal became synonymous with the general area, and later was attached to the location of the Fort on the south shore of the Annapolis Basin where the Allains River enters the Annapolis River.

From the early 1600s to 1710, Port Royal was frequently the administrative and military centre of Acadia. Samuel de Champlain and Marc Lescarbot lived there until 1607. The Habitation was reoccupied in 1610, but was burned by the Enlgish in 1613. It was the first of several attacks it would suffer. It became the first place, in the 1630s, where Acadians settlers began to dike to farm. It became the capital of the French colony of "Acadie".

In 1710, troops under the command of Colonel Francis Nicholson attacked and defeated the French-held Port Royal, and Port Royal was renamed Annapolis Royal in honour of Queen Anne. As a result, Annapolis Royal became the first capital of Nova Scotia and remained so until 1749 when Halifax assumed that role. The Acadians in the area were deported in 1755.

The Port-Royal Habitation, a cluster of small buildings joined by a protective wall, was reconstructed in 1938-39, and became a national historic site in 1940.

In the summer of 1955, a small, dedicated group of Acadians from the region of Clare organized a festival in celebration of the 200th anniversary of the Acadian Deportation of 1755. This first, Festival Acadien de Clare, was "one big family reunion", a fun-filled daylong event featuring a street parade and local bazaar. The party was a huge success and what was originally perceived as a one-time event was repeated year after year. Over the ensuing decades the festival expanded and came to epitomize the spirit of Acadians and Acadian culture in Nova Scotia.

Today, the Festival Acadien de Clare is a major cultural event in Eastern Canada and the oldest Acadian festival in the world. The weeklong event with its street parades, craft exhibits, theatre productions, cultural demonstrations, live music, bazaars and banquets attracts nearly 10,000 visitors to Clare every summer. The festival adds thousands of dollars to the local economy and dozens of volunteers work for months to make the annual event a success. NOVA SCOTIA

BAIE-SAINTE-MARIE 2004 USES TWO DIES

The Great Canadian Mint struck the Baie-Sainte-Marie NS 2004 tokens and it seems must have used two dies in the striking of this issue. The gold plated token has a variety on the "CL(star)RE". On the First 100 pieces that were gold plated the "CL(star)RE" is frosted and on the rest of the tokens the "CL(star)RE" consists of larger letters with the first and last letters rounded and the star is thicker. The difference is clearly shown by the pictures.
